In Mensonge romantique et vérité romanesque (Deceit, Desire and the Novel, 1961), philosopher and critic René Girard identifies in Le Rouge et le Noir the triangular structure he denominates as "mimetic desire"; that is, one desires a person only when he or she is desired by someone else.

The Red and the Black - Wikipedia

"Precisely the Christian framework within which people understand Deceit, Desire, and the Novel can turn people off." The conference, to circumvent the perceived problem, limited its scope to the 50-year-old book they were celebrating, considering René's mimetic theory and "the invidious nature of human desire," but banishing his theories about the scapegoat mechanisms and ...
